

Spatial experimentation

Designed by Gema Gutiérrez, FREGIO is the inaugural decorative piece of the SEMPITERNO collection by PUNTOFILIPINO. Composed of blocks of natural stone, wood and metal, this creation emerges as a sculptural exploration of architecture, whose design veers towards a geometric abstraction. This piece is an embodiment of spatial experimentation with sculptural forms, echoing a design philosophy like that of costume design, where classical architectural elements, such as fragments of pilasters, serve as muses to evoke a scenographic space reminiscent of a deconstructed ruin.

Office for Time-Travelers

Temp Project designed the interiors of a 180 m<sup>2</sup> office located in the 1896 building erected by architect Andreas Ferdinand Krauss in the historical part of Kyiv. By designing a modern space within the old walls, the designer sought to bring out the authentic charm of the building. The result is a bright and eclectic office with local color accents and thoughtful, functional zoning for 20 people.

Leach Home

In collaboration with interior designer Ondrej Zdercik, JAIME SALVÁ, Architecture & Interior Design has renovated a residence in Palma de Mallorca creating a functional and contemporary space. Particular attention was paid to the conservation of the original elements, such as the local "mares" stone in the structural pillars and in the walls or exposed beams, which combine harmoniously with touches of classic elegance such as walls covered with moldings and industrial elements such as the exposed fireplace.
